2016 Burgundy:
Small but precious

2016 Burgundy

2016 in Burgundy was a very challenging growing season, with one of the worst spring frosts ever experienced since 1981, that wiped the crop of many growers and a very wet May and June that created a high disease pressure well into July.

To make things worse, In Chablis, Macônnais and Beaujolais severe hailstorms hit the ground in spring and summer.

Summer finally arrived at the end of July and continued, with hot and dry conditions leading to a small water stress for the vines. A very sunny September, with a cooling northerly wind, offered perfect ripening conditions for a fresh and balanced vintage. Despite the disastrous events the surviving grapes reached a good phenolic maturity and the wines show the freshness and finesse typical of a cold vintage.

At O.W.Loeb we have the privilege to hold a good selection of serious wines from this vintage that is now almost impossible to find on the market.

Here are two 6- bottle cases with wines that have reached a perfect drinkability.

In addition to this offer, from the same vintage, we have the last few bottles of the below wines - two of the most sought-after growers.
